Brief description	This module develops students' knowledge and engagement with theological and doctrinal foundations of the Christian faith, as understood within their historical context and in dialogue with contemporary issues, challenges and objections. Students engage with several areas of Christian doctrine, normally including creation, salvation, pneumatology and eschatology including reference to contemporary variations in how biblical texts are read. This module also allows students to understand the development of evangelicalism and critically engage with competing perspectives in evangelical theology. Doctrinal commitments are considered in view of ethical issues, and objections raised in the contemporary world. Students are enabled to formulate, synthesise, and articulate their own views, recognising their own positioning in light of a range of sources and scholarly perspectives.
